MORNING WATCH

HWMR: 2020 December Semiannual Training Crystallization - Study of Job, Proverbs, and Ecclesiastes

Week 11: The Intrinsic Significance of Fearing the Lord in the Economy of God

Portion from Day 2:

We must make a distinction between reverence and godliness. God's people in the Old Testament revered Him, but in the New Testament His people have a godly living. With respect to the living God, man should have reverence, but with respect to the God of resurrection, man should express godliness. In the Old Testament God was manifested as the living God; hence, His people needed to revere Him. In the New Testament God is manifested as the God of resurrection; hence, the New Testament believers need godliness....As God's New Testament people, we need not only reverence but also godliness. This means that in our living we should not only express the living God but also the God of resurrection.

To revere God is to deal with sin, the flesh, and the world in our living. To be godly is not only to have the absence of sin, the flesh, and the world but to be mingled with and to express God. Some believers revere God, but others possess godliness. Such believers do not exhibit sin, the flesh, or the world. On the contrary, they exhibit something mysterious, something that is both man and God. This is God being manifested in man. This is godliness.

The apostle Paul says, "Exercise yourself unto godliness" (1 Tim. 4:7). This means that, on the one hand, we should revere God and not touch sin, the flesh, or the world. On the other hand, we should follow God and express Him in our living. If God does not move, neither should we. We should move only when God moves. This is a great lesson that needs much learning and exercise. (CWWL, 1957, vol. 3,

"The Living God and the God of Resurrection," pp. 28, 30)

The Spirit Being Not Yet

Now we come to a very hard point. In John 7:37-38 the Lord Jesus cried, "If anyone thirsts, let him come to Me and drink. He who believes into Me, as the Scripture said, out of his innermost being shall flow rivers of living water." Then in verse 39 John explains that the Lord spoke this "concerning the Spirit, whom those who believed into Him were about to receive; for the Spirit was not yet, because Jesus had not yet been glorified." John does not say "the Spirit of God," "the Spirit of Jehovah," or "the Holy Spirit," but "the Spirit." He further says that when Jesus was crying out to the people, "the Spirit was not yet."

In The Spirit of Christ Andrew Murray indicates that before Christ's glorification, that is, before His resurrection (Luke 24:26), the Spirit of God had only divinity. But when Christ was resurrected, the Spirit of God became the Spirit of the glorified Jesus. If He were still only the Spirit of God, He would have only the divine element. Murray's word implies that the Spirit, in becoming the Spirit of the glorified Jesus following Christ's resurrection, now has the element of humanity.
